OPINION

D. BROOKS, Circuit Judge:

This consolidated appeal challenges determinations by the United States Tax Court that an officer and shareholder of each of the corporate taxpayers was an employee and that the taxpayer was therefore liable for taxes under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act ("FICA"), 26 U.S.C. Secs. 3101-3128, and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act ("FUTA"), 26 U.S.C. Secs. 3301-3311. For the reasons set forth below, we will affirm.

I.

The taxpayers, Veterinary Surgical Consultants, P.C. ("VSC") and Yeagle Drywall Company, Inc. ("YDC"), both received from the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") a "Notice of Determination Concerning Worker Classification Under Section 7436." VSC's notice, dated November 17, 1998, advised that the IRS had determined that Kenneth K. Sadanaga, D.V.M., was to be classified as an employee for purposes of federal employment taxes for all quarters in 1994, 1995 and 1996 and that the taxpayer was not "entitled to relief from this classification pursuant to section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978." VSC filed a timely petition for redetermination with the United States Tax Court and the parties stipulated to the facts. The stipulation established that the taxpayer was a subchapter "S" corporation which provided consulting and surgical services to vaterinarians. The corporation was solely owned by Dr. Sadanga, who was also its president and its only officer since incorporation. He alone performed the veterinary services rendered by VSC. In addition to his professional services, Dr. Sadanga managed the business, performing all the administrative tasks.

VSC did not make regular payments to Dr. Sadanga for his services. Instead the money from VSC's bank account was withdrawn by Dr. Sadanga as the need arose. The payments were not listed by VSC on its federal Form 1120S return as compensation to its officer or as wages. Instead, VSC computed its ordinary income and Dr. Sadanga indicated this amount as non-passive income on the Schedule K-1 of his Form 1040 Return. The non-passive income on his returns for 1994, 1995, and 1996, respectively, was $83,995.50, $173,030.39, and $161,483.35.

The IRS issued its Notice of Determination Concerning Worker Classification to YDC in February, 2000, advising that John Yeagle was classified as an employee for calendar years 1995, 1996, and 1997. Yeagle owned 99% of the business, with the remaining 1% in his wife's name. Yeagle was president of his business since its incorporation and performed the following services: soliciting business; ordering supplies; executing agreements; managing finances; and hiring and firing independent contractors.

Yeagle, like Sadanaga, did not receive payments from his company on a regular basis. Rather, Yeagle "would take money from [YDC's] bank account as Mr. Yeagle's needs arose and/or would pay personal expenses from such account as he desired." Like VSC, Yeagle Drywall did not pay employment taxes for the services rendered by its owner, John Yeagle. Instead, it filed a Form 1120S reflecting the income earned by the corporation and Yeagle indicated that amount as non-passive income on the Schedule K-1 of his Form 1040 Return. The non-passive income reported for 1995, 1996, and 1997, respectively, was $26,711.08, $32,973.39, and $34,508.90.

Based on these stipulated facts, the Tax Court determined, in separate decisions, that the IRS had not erred in classifying Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle as employees under the FICA and the FUTA. It found that the payments received by Dr. Sadanga and Yeagle were remuneration for the substantial services performed on behalf of the corporate taxpayer and that VSC and YDC were liable for the unpaid FICA and FUTA taxes. The Tax Court also concluded that neither taxpayer could obtain relief from the taxes due under the safe harbor established by section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978.

II.

We have "exclusive jurisdiction" under 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7482(a)(1) "to review the decisions of the Tax Court. . .in the same manner and to the same extent as decisions of the district courts in civil actions tried without a jury[.]" 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7482(a)(1). "Thus, we have plenary review over the Tax Court's findings of law, including its construction and application of the Internal Revenue Code." PNC Bancorp, Inc. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 212 F.3d 822, 827 (3d Cir. 2000).

III.

FICA and FUTA impose taxes on employers based on the wages paid to individuals in their employ. 26 U.S.C. Secs. 3111, 3301. "Wages" is defined broadly by both Acts, with certain exceptions not applicable here, as "all remuneration for employment[.]" 26 U.S.C. Secs. 3121(a), 3306(b). Employment is defined as "any service of whatever nature, performed.. .by an employee for the person employing him[.]" 26 U.S.C. Secs. 3121(b), 3306(c). FICA also defines "employee," in pertinent part, as:

> (1) any officer of a corporation; or
> (2) any individual who, under the usual common law rules applicable in determining the employer-employee relationship, has the status of an employee[.] 26 U.S.C. Sec. 3121(d).

Treasury regulation Sec. 31.3121(d)-1(b) restates the general rule that an officer of a corporation is an employee of the corporation and specifies that there is an exception for an "officer of a corporation who as such does not perform any services or performs only minor services and who neither receives nor is entitled to receive, directly or indirectly, any remuneration[.]" 26 C.F.R. Sec. 31.3121(d)-1(b).

Consistent with this law, the Tax Court focused on whether the distributions of income made by VSC and YDC were remuneration for the services performed by Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle. The court found that each of these individuals performed substantial services for the corporate taxpayers and that the distributions of income received were, in fact, remuneration for the services rendered. Accordingly, it held that the taxpayers were liable for federal employment taxes under the FICA and the FUTA.

We agree. Under the FICA, an officer of a corporation is an employee unless he performs only minor services. 26 U.S.C. Sec. 3121(d)(1); 26 C.F.R. Sec. 31.3121(d)-1(b). Dr. Sadanga's services were anything but minor inasmuch as he was the only source of revenue for VSC and performed all of the administrative tasks. Likewise, John Yeagle managed and directed all of the activities undertaken by YDC. Because these services were substantial, the Tax Court did not err in concluding that the distributions of income paid by the corporate taxpayers were remuneration for services rendered, thereby constituting wages under the FICA and the FUTA.

The Ninth Circuit's decision in Spicer Accounting, Inc. v. United States, 918 F.2d 90 (9th Cir. 1990), is instructive. There, the court determined that the dividends paid by an S corporation to a shareholder, who was also an officer and the only certified public accountant performing services for the business, were wages. It relied upon: (1) treasury regulations which provide that the "form of payment is immaterial, the only relevant factor being whether the payments were actually received as compensation for employment," id. (citing 26 C.F.R. Secs. 31.3121(a)-1(b), 31.3306(b)-1(b)); (2) the definition of employee in Sec. 3121(d)(1); and (3) the exception contained in the treasury regulation for officers performing minor services, 26 C.F.R. Sec. 31.3121(d)-1(b). Because Mr. Spicer was the only individual providing accounting services to the corporation and these services were substantial, the court concluded that the dividends were remuneration and subject to federal employment taxes. 918 F.2d at 92-93; see also Joseph Radtke, S.C. v. United States, 895 F.2d 1196 (7th Cir. 1990).

The taxpayers argue, however, that the Tax Court erred because it failed to consider whether, under the stipulated facts, Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle were employees "under the usual common law rules applicable in determining the employer-employee relationship," as provided by Sec. 3121(d)(2). They rely upon Texas Carbonate Co. v. Phinney, 307 F.2d 289 (5th Cir. 1962), which conducted an employer-employee analysis, consistent with Sec. 3121(d)(2), despite the fact that the purported employee was an officer of the corporate taxpayer.

Reliance upon Texas Carbonate is misplaced for two reasons. First, it is neither binding nor authoritative in light of its failure to apply the plain language of Sec. 3121(d) which defines employee by using the conjunction "or" between subparagraphs (1) and (2). This conjunction signifies an intent that an individual may qualify as an employee under either set of circumstances. Here, Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle satisfy the criteria set forth in Sec. 3121(d)(1) and the applicable treasury regulation Sec. 31.3121(d)-1(b), thereby obviating any reason to analyze whether they are employees under the usual common law rules under subparagraph (2). It is important to point out that by rejecting the taxpayers' argument, we are avoiding an interpretation of Sec. 3121(d) which would render subparagraph (1) superfluous. See Rosenberg v. XM Ventures, 274 F.3d 137, 141 (3d Cir. 2001).

Second, despite the Texas Carbonate court's failure to recognize the applicability of Sec. 3121(d)(1), its analysis considered whether the services of the officer, in the absence of any control by the corporation, were substantial. It pointed out that the officer was a stockholder, a director, and a manager of the company, in charge of its sales, and the development of its markets. These services, in the court's view, were substantial and justified the determination that: (1) the officer was an employee; and (2) the corporation was liable for federal employment taxes. 307 F.2d at 292-93.

IV.

Under Section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978, there is a safe harbor for taxpayers who owe FICA and FUTA taxes as a result of wrongfully failing to classify certain individuals as employees. See P.L. 95-600, as amended by P.L. 96-167, P.L. 96-541, P.L. 97-248, P.L. 99-514 and P.L. 104-188 (hereinafter cited as "Section 530"). This uncodified section relieves a taxpayer of certain federal employment tax liabilities arising from a failure to treat an individual as an employee if the taxpayer had a "reasonable basis for not treating such individual as an employee." Section 530 (a)(1): 303 West 42nd St. Enter., Inc. v. I.R.S., 181 F.3d 272, 274 (2d Cir. 1999). Section 530(a)(2) specifies thst a taxpayer shall be treated as having a reasonable basis for not treating an individual as an employee if it reasonably relied on:

> (A) judicial precedent, published rulings, technical advice with respect to the taxpayer, or a letter ruling to the taxpayer;
> (B) a past Internal Revenue Service audit of the taxpayer[;] or
> (C) long standing recognized practice of a significant segment of the industry in which such individual was engaged.

Section 530 (a)(2)

Here, the taxpayers assert that the Tax Court improperly determined that they were not entitled to relief under this safe harbor provision. They contend that there was a reasonable basis for not treating Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle as employees, citing the judicial precedent in Texas Carbonate, 307 F.2d at 289.

As we explained above, Texas Carbonate is not authoritative and it does not support the taxpayers' argument that Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle were not employees. Thus, any reliance upon Texas Carbonate by either VSC or YDC was unreasonable, particularly in light of the subsequent decisions in Radtke, 895 F.2d at 1197-98, and Spicer Accounting, 918 F.2d at 94-95. Indeed, Spicer Accounting rejected the taxpayer's argument that it had a reasonable basis for not treating its officer as an employee under Section 530 and should not be held liable. The court reasoned that Mr. Spicer was "for all practical purposes, the central worker for the taxpayer" and it declared that a "corporation's sole full-time worker must be treated as an employee." 918 F.2d at 95.

Finally, the taxpayers argue that their due process rights were violated because the IRS failed to give written notice of the provisions of Section 530 at either audits. This argument was not raised before the Tax Court and we will not consider it for the first time on appeal. Harris v. City of Philadelphia, 35 F.3d 840, 845 (3d Cir. 1994).

V.

Accordingly, because Dr. Sadanga and John Yeagle were properly classified by the IRS as employees of VSC and YDC, respecively, and there was no reasonable basis for not treating them as employees, we will affirm the decision of the Tax Court.

To the Clerk of Court:

Please file the foregoing Opinion.

Docket No. 3908-00 Filed October 15, 2001.

MEMORANDUM OPINION

JACOBS, Judge: This case is before the Court on a petition for redetermination of a Notice of Determonation Concerning Worker Classification Under Section 7436 (Notice of Determination). It was submitted to the Court fully stipulated under Rule 122. The sole issue to be decided is whether John G. Yeagle (Mr. Yeagle) is an employee of petitioner for the period at issue (each of the four quarters of 1995, 1996, and 1997) for purposes of Federal employment taxes. For convenience, we use the term "Federal employment tax" to refer to taxes under secs. 3101-3125 (enacted as Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA), ch. 9, 53 Stat. 175 (1939)) and secs. 3301-3311 (enacted as Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA), ch. 9, 53 Stat. 183 (1939)).

Rule references are to the Tax Court Rules of Practice and Procedure, and except as otherwise noted, section references are to the Internal Revenue Code in effect for the years at issue.

Background

The stipulation of facts and the attached exhibits are incorporated herein. The stipulated facts are hereby found.

Petitioner is an S corporation that was incorporated in Pennsylvania on October 2, 1989. At the time the petition was filed , petitioner's principal place of business was in Quakertown, Pennsylvania. Petitioner operates a drywall construction business that is the sole source of petitioner's income. Mr. Yeagle owns 99 percent of petitioner's stock. Mr. Yeagle's wife, Terree Yeagle (Mrs. Yeagle), owns the remaining 1 percent. Since petitioner's incorporation, Mr. Yeagle has been its president, and Mrs. Yeagle has been its vice president and secretary.

Mr. Yeagle performs many services for petitioner, including soliciting business, ordering supplies, entering into oral and written agreements, overseeing finances, collecting money owed to petitioner, hiring and firing independent contractors, obtaining clients, maintaining client relationships, and generally managing petitioner's business affairs.

During the period at issue, all payments made to petitioner were deposited into petitioner's checking account. Mr. Yeagle is the only person with signature authority on petitioner's bank account. Petitioner did not make regular payments to Mr. Yeagle; Mr. Yeagle withdrew money from petitioner's bank account at his discretion. Mr. Yeagle also paid personal expenses from petitioner's bank account at his discretion. Mr. Yeagle did not receive any wages, salary, or tips from any other business entity, or income from any other S corporation during 1995, 1996, and 1997.

During the period at issue, petitioner did not treat any individual, including Mr. Yeagle, as an employee, and did not file a form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, or a Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return, for any quarter during the period at issue. Petitioner treated individuals who performed services for it, other than Mr. Yeagle, as independent contractors and issued Forms 1099-MISC, Miscellaneous Income, to those individuals. Petitioner did not issue a Form 1099-MISC or a Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement, to Mr. Yeagle for 1995, 1996, or 1997.

On Forms 1120S, U.S. Income Tax Return for an S Corporation, petitioner reported net income from its trade or business for 1995, 1996, and 1997, in the respective amounts of $26,711.08, $32,973.39, and $34,508.90. Petitioner paid these amounts to Mr. Yeagle and reported these amounts as the Yeagles' share of its income on Schedules K-1, Shareholders' Shares of Income, Credits, Deductions, etc., of the Forms 1120S. Petitioner did not allocate the income between Mr. and Mrs. Yeagle.

During 1995, 1996, and 1997, petitioner distributed all of its net income to the Yeagles. Petitioner reported on Schedules M-2, Analysis of Accumulated Adjustments Account, Other Adjustments Account, and Shareholders' Undistributed Taxable Income Previously Taxed, of the Forms 1120S that the amounts it paid to the Yeagles were distributions other than dividend distributions paid from accumulated earnings and profits.

The Yeagles timely filed Forms 1040, U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns for 1995, 1996, and 1997. On Schedule E, Supplemental Income and Loss, of the Yeagles' Forms 1040s, they reported their share of petitioner's income (as indicated on Schedules K-1) as nonpassive income from an S corporation.

On February 23, 2000, respondent issued to petitioner a Notice of Determination, in which respondent determined that (1) Mr. Yeagle was petitioner's employee for purposes of Federal employment taxes, and (2) petitioner was not entitled to 'safe harbor" relief from these taxes as provided by section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 92 Stat. 2885 (Section 530). Attached to the Notice of Determination was a schedule detailing the amount of the proposed Federal employment taxes. Thereafter, petitioner filed with the Court a timely petition seeking our review of respondent's Notice of Determination.

Discussion

Petitioner contends that Mr. Yeagle was not its employee and that it properly distributed its net income to the Yeagles, as its only shareholders, pursuant to section 1366. On the other hand, respondent contends that Mr. Yeagle was an employee of petitioner because he was an officer of petitioner and performed substantial services on petitioner's behalf.

Sections 3111 and 3301 impose FICA (social security) and FUTA (unemployment) taxes on employers for wages paid to their employees. An officer of a corporation, "who performs substantial services for a corporation and who receives remuneration in any form for those services is considered an employee, whose wages are subject to Federal employment taxes." Veterinary Surgical Consultants, P.C. v. Commissioner, 117 T.C. --, -- (2001)(slip op. at 7); see also sec. 3121(d); sec. 31.3121(d)-1(b), Employment Tax Regs.

With respect to the case at hand, Mr. Yeagle is an officer of petitioner who performed substantial services for petitioner, including soliciting business, ordering supplies, entering into oral and written agreements, overseeing finances, collecting money owed to petitioner, hiring and firing independent contractors, obtaining clients, maintaining client relationships, and generally managing petitioner's business affairs.

Petitioner distributed all of its net income to the Yeagles. Those distributions were compensation for the services provided to petitioner by Mr. Yeagle.

Petitioner contends that the amounts paid to Mr. Yeagle were distributions of its corporate net income, rather than wages, and that Mr. Yeagle properly reported the net income as nonpassive income from an S corporation on his Forms 1040s. Mr. Yeagle's reporting the distributions as nonpassive income from an S corporation has no bearing on the Federal employment tax treatment of those wages. Veterinary Surgical Consultants, P.C. v. Commissioner, supra at -- (slip op. at 8). We hold that Mr. Yeagle is an employee of petitioner for the period at issue and, as such, the payments to him from petitioner constitute wages subject to Federal employment taxes.

Despite our determination that Mr. Yeagle is an employee of petitioner and that the payments to him from petitioner are wages subject to Federal employment taxes, Section 530 allows petitioner relief from employment tax liability if two conditions are satisfied. Section 530(a)(1) provides in relevant part:

> (1) In general.-- If
> > (A) for purposes of employment taxes, the taxpayer did not treat an individual as an employee for any period * * *, and
> > (B) in the case of periods after December 31, 1978, all Federal tax returns (including information returns) required to be filed by the taxpayer with respect to such individual for such period are filed on a basis consistent with the taxpayer's treatment of such individual as not being an employee, then, for purposes of applying such taxes for such period with respect to the taxpayer, the individual shall be deemed not to be an employee unless the taxpayer had no reasonable basis for not treating such individual as an employee."

Here, the first of the two conditions is satisfied. Petitioner did not treat Mr. Yeagle as an employee during the period in issue. Since its incorporation, petitioner filed its tax returns reflecting all withdrawals by Mr. Yeagle as distributions of petitioner's net income, not wages.

However, the second condition of Section 530(a)(1) is not satisfied because petitioner had no reasonable basis for not treating Mr. Yeagle as an employee. For purposes of Section 530(a)(1), a taxpayer is treated as having a reasonable basis for not treating an individual as an employee if the taxpayer's treatment of the individual was in reasonable reliance of judicial precedent, published rulings, technical advice with respect to the taxpayer, a letter ruling to the taxpayer, or longstanding recognized practice of a significant segment of the industry in which the individual was engaged. Section 530(a)(2); see also Veterinary Surgical Consultants, P.C. v. Commissioner, supra, at -- (slip op. at 10-11); Rev. Proc. 85-18, 1985-1 C.B. 518.

Petitioner cites to the identical cases and ruling addressed in Veterinary Surgical Consultants, P.C. v. Commissioner, supra, and makes the same arguments as those made by the taxpayer in that case. For the reasons set forth in that opinion, we find that petitioner did not have a reasonable basis for not treating Mr. Yeagle as an employee.

In this case, respondent's position is supported by the plain language of the statute, the applicable Treasury regilations, published revenue rulings, and cases interpreting the applicable statutes. Petitioner's position is inconsistent with the weight of authority.

We have considered all of petitioner's arguments, and, to the extent not specifically addressed, we find them unpersuasive or irrelevant.

After the petition was filed in this case, Congress amended section 7436(a) to provide this Court with jurisdiction to determine the correct amounts of Federal employment taxes that relate to the Secretary's determination concerning worker classification. See Community Renewal Tax Relief Act of 2000 (CRTA), Pub. L. 106-554, sec. 314(f), 114 Stat. 2763A-643. That amendment was made retroactive to the effective date of section 7436(a). CRTRA sec. 314(g), 114 Stat. 2763A-643.

The parties filed a Stipulation of Settled Issues setting forth the proper amount of Federal employment taxes owed by petitioner in the event we find that Mr. Yeagle is petitioner's employee for purposes of Federal employment taxes (which we do). The amount so stipulated will be reflected in our decision document.

To reflect the foregoing,

Decision will be entered for respondent in accordance with the parties' stipulations as to amounts.

DECISION

Pursuant to the determination of the Court as set forth in its Memorandum Findings of Fact and Opinion, filed October 15, 2001, it is ORDERED and DECREED that with respect to the Notice of Determination Concerning Worker Classification Under Section 7436, dated February 7, 2000, John G. Yeagle was an employee of petitioner for purposes of Federal employment taxes for the taxable periods 1995, 1996, and 1997.

That petitioner is not entitled to relief under section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978.

That the amounts of Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA) tax imposed under I.R.C. sections 3101 and 3102(a) due from petitioner for the taxable periods 1995, 1996, and 1997 are as follows:

Tax Period Ended	Amount of Tax
March 31, 1995	$1,021.69
June 30, 1995	1,021.69
September 30, 1995	1,021.69
December 31, 1995	1,021.69
March 31, 1996	$1,261.21
June 30, 1996	1,261.21
September 30, 1996	1,261.21
December 31, 1996	1,261.21
March 31, 1997	$1,319.97
June 30, 1997	1,319.97
September 30, 1997	1,319.97
December 31, 1997	1,319.97

That the amounts of Federal Unemployment Act Tax (FUTA) tax imposed under I.R.C. section 3301(a) due from petitioner for the taxable periods 1995, 1996, and 1997 are as follows:

Tax Period Ended	Amount of Tax

Circuit Judge

Dated: MARCH 05, 2003

*The Honorable Richard D. Cudahy, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, who sat on the original panel, is limited to panel rehearing only.

PERTINENT PORTIONS OF THE TEXT OF FEDERALLY ENACTED STATUTES RELEVANT TO THIS CASE PURSUANT TO SUPREME COURT RULES: 14.1.(f) and 14.1.(i)(v)

The following represents the pertinent parts of various Statutes which are being relied on by the Petitioner and referred to in the body of the Petition. In addition to the following Statutes, Petitioner is hereby including pertinent portions of relevant Internal Revenue Service pronouncement (Rev. Proc. 85-18):

I. PERTINENT PARTS OF FEDERALLY ENACTED STATUTES:

A. 26 U.S.C. Sec. 1366:

"SEC. 1366 PASS-THRU OF ITEMS TO SHAREHOLDERS.

(a). DETERMINATION OF SHAREHOLDER'S TAX LIABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining the tax under this chapter of a shareholder for the shareholder's taxable year in which the taxable year of the S corporation ends... there shall be taken into account the shareholder's pro rata share of the corporation's—

(A) items of income. . .loss, deduction, or credit the separate treatment of which could effect the liability for tax of any shareholder, and

(B) nonseparately computed income or loss...

(b) CHARACTER PASSED THRU.—The character of any item included in a shareholder's pro rata share under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) shall be determined as if such item were realized directly from the source from which realized by the corporation, or incurred in the same manner as incurred by the corporation.

(c) GROSS INCOME OF A SHAREHOLDER.—In any case where it is necessary to determine the gross income of a shareholder for purposes of this title, such gross income shall include the shareholder's pro rata share of the gross income of the corporation.

B. 26 U.S.C. Sec. 3121(d):

"(d) EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" means—

(1) any officer of a corporation; or

(2) any individual who, under the usual common law rules applicable in determining the employer-employee relationship, has the status of an employee; or

(3) any individual (other than an individual who is an employee under paragraph (1) or (2) who performs services for remuneration for any person —. . .

If the contract of service contemplates that substantially all of such services are to be performed personally by such individual; except that an individual shall not be included in the term "employee" under the provisions of this paragraph if such individual has a substantial investment in facilities used in connection with the performance of such services (other than in facilities for transportation), or if the services are in the nature of a single transaction not part of a continuing relationship with the person for whom the services are performed. . ."

"Act Sec. 530(a) TERMINATION OF CERTAIN EMPLOYMENT TAX LIABILITY.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

(B) In the case of periods after December 31, 1978, all Federal tax returns (including information returns) required to be filed by the taxpayer with respect to such individual for such period are filed on a basis consistent with the taxpayer's treatment of such individual as not being an employee, then for purposes of applying such taxes for such period with respect to the taxpayer, the individual shall be deemed not to be an employee unless the taxpayer had no reasonable basis for not treating such individual as an employee.

(2) STATUTORY STANDARDS PROVIDING ONE METHOD OF SATISFYING THE REQUIREMENTS OF PARAGRAPH (1).—For purposes of paragraph (1), a taxpayer shall in any case be treated as having a reasonable basis for not treating an individual as an employee for a period if the taxpayer's treatment of such individual for such period was in reasonable reliance on any of the following:

(A) judicial precedent, published rulings, technical advice with respect to the taxpayer, or a letter ruling to the taxpayer;

(B) a past Internal Revenue Service audit of the taxpayer in which there was no assessment attributable to the treatment (for employment tax purposes) of the individuals holding positions substantially similar to the position held by this individual; or

(C) long-standing recognized practice of a significant segment of the industry in which such individual was engaged. . ."

"Act Sec. 530(b) PROHIBITION AGAINST REGULATIONS AND RULINGS OF EMPLOYMENT STATUS.—No regulation or Revenue Ruling shall be published on or after the date of the enactment of this Act and before the effective date of any law hereafter enacted clarifying the employment status of individuals for purposes of the employment taxes by the Department of the Treasury (including the Internal Revenue Service) with respect to the emplyment status of any individual for purposes of the emplyment taxes."

"Act Sec. 530(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) EMPLOYMENT TAX.— The term "employment tax" means any tax imposed by Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(2) EMPLOYMENT STATUS.— The term "employment status" means the status of an individual, under the usual common law rules applicable in determining the employer-employee relationship, as an employee or as an independent contractor (or other individual who is not an employee)."

"Act Sec. 530(e) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLICATION OF SECTION.—

(1) NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY OF SECTION.— An officer or employee of the Internal Revenue Service shall, before or at the commencement of any audit inquiry relating to the employment status of one or more individuals who perform services for the taxpayer, provide the taxpayer with a written notice of the provisions of this section."

II. PERTINENT PART OF NON-LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY:

A. Relevant Excerpts From Revenue Procedure 85-18, I.R.B. 1985-13, 27 (a non-legislative Internal Revenue interprative promulgation):

". . .SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 "Safe Haven" Rules

There are several alternative standards that constitute "safe havens" in determining whether a taxpayer has a "reasonable basis" for not treating an individual as an employee. . ."

". . .A taxpayer who fails to meet any of the three "safe havens" may nevertheless be entitled to relief if the taxpayer can demonstrate, in some other manner, a reasonable basis for not treating the individual as an employee. In H.R. Rep. No. 95-1748, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 5 (1978), 1978-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 629, 633, it is indicated that "reasonable basis" should be construed liberally in favor of the taxpayer."

". . ..09 Definition of Employee

For purposes of section 530(a) of the Act, the term employee means employees under sections 3121(d), 3306(i) and 3401(C) of the Code."
